

Abstract

Molding composition for the transfer of micro-structured surfaces

The present invention relates to a composition comprising a binder and spherical inorganic matrix particles. The invention furthermore relates to a porous shaped article obtainable from said composition, a method of making said article and the use of said article as a mold or a device for conducting a fluid between a space and a duct or for deep drawing or engraving of plastic films and foils.